The Center for Book Arts is proud to announce the Fifth International Edible Book Festival, an appetizing event celebrated this year by artists worldwide on Thursday, April 1. April Fool's Day is also the birthday of famous cook and writer Brillat-Savarin and a perfect date to eat words. Hosted for the previous years at The Center for Book Arts, the 2004 Books2Eat Festival will be held in downtown Manhattan at BAUHAUS, 196 Orchard Street.

For this festival all works of art must be edible and have something to do with books: looking like books, including a text to read, or illustrating a theme on words. The occasion celebrates hearty novels, cheesy literature, tender poems, and ingesting culture! Books may be of any style or size, but must be made entirely of edible material. Succulent inspiration from previous international festivals can be found at the books2eat website: www.colophon.com/ediblebooks.html

Deadline for proposals is March 15, 2004. Participants will be notified by March 19, 2001. Accepted books must be delivered to BAUHAUS, 196 Orchard Street, telephone: (212) 477-1550 (one block south of Houston), on April 1st by 6 p.m., fully assembled and ready to eat. All books become the property of The Center for Book Arts, and will be photographed for the festival archive. Keeping with the tradition of the edible book festival to serve as a fund-raiser for literary associations and book arts centers, the works of the 2004 Books2Eat Festival will be sold in a silent auction open to the public, starting at 6 p.m., to support The Center's educational programs. The Center for Book Arts, a not-for-profit organization founded in 1974, offers over 100 classes and workshops in bookbinding, letterpress printing, paper marbling, typography, and related fields.
